Emotional, Rational and Situational Intelligence

Presented by Tim Schneider, Aegis Learning

Class Description: This class is the groundbreaking combination of three pieces of intelligence that neuroscientists and behaviorists indicate have a greater impact on success than traditionally measured IQ. This class combines learning and growth in emotional intelligence, relational intelligence and situational intelligence to provide an incredible growth in personal and professional success factors.

At work, in social settings and in society, we are faced with many situations from difficult team members, meetings with senior leaders, interactions at home and even sitting in a traffic jam. This part of the program reviews situations and both appropriate responses and inappropriate/awkward responses that are designed to raise cognitive awareness and recognition. Situational Intelligence also adds skills related to physical space and cause/effect events that are very common in everyday life.

This emerging science and related practical applications allows participants to measure, evaluate and build stronger and more meaningful relationships at work, home, with customers, with team members and throughout life. Relational Intelligence also engages powerful networking tools and reviews relationship based influence needed by leaders.
